TEACHERS' VETO SUSTAINED

AMERICANS FLEEING FOR THEIR LIVES

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—Francisco de la Barra, Minister of Foreign Relations, issued an official statement to-day, saying that President Diaz and Vice-President Corral would resign this afternoon and that the provisional government would at once assume charge.

TEACHERS' BILL VETO IS UPHELD

Governor Foss's veto of the Boston teachers' salary bill stands.

By a roll-call vote of 139 yeas to 71 nays, with two pairs, the House this afternoon failed to override the Governor's veto.

The veto survived the House by an even kneh. Two more votes changed from "yeas" to "nays" would have passed the overriding measure.

A two-thirds vote of those present and voting, counting pairs, is required to pass a bill over the Executive veto. The rule is that, in reckoning a two-thirds vote, pairs must be counted. This meant that a two-thirds vote of 214 members were necessary. The overriding measure needed 141 votes. The best it could do was 139.

Ten school teachers were in the spectators' galleries when the survival of the veto was announced.

The House action kills all chances for the salary bill for this season. The House having failed to override the veto the Senate will not consider the matter.

Two and Half Hours' Debate.

The debate was one of the hottest of the year and lasted over two and one-half hours. Representatives Conway and Mc-Morrow of Boston led the fight in favor of overriding the Governor, while Representative Meaney of Blackstone, a Democrat, led the fight to sustain the Governor.

When the Governor's veto was reached Representative Montague of Ward 10, Boston, moved to postpone consideration for one week in order that the Committee on Cities might have an opportunity to prepare a compromise bill, which would do away with the objections of the Governor and the School Committee.

Representatives Washburn of Worcester and Saunders of Clinton opposed postponement and the House refused to lay it over by an overwhelming voice vote.

Representative Conway was the first speaker in favor of passing the bill over the Governor's veto. He said:

"There is no record that the committee has officially acted against the bill, but the two members of the committee who have opposed it have distinctly stated that they were acting as private citizens. The bill is not a violation of home rule, but is rather a guarantee to school teachers that the School Board will do what it knows it ought to do."

Cushing Upholds Veto.

Representative Cushing of Ward 21 said the Governor's veto was sound and that he believed the bill was an unwarranted interference with an executive department of th City of Boston.

Representative Newton of South Boston said: "The School Committee does not properly represent the people and is really under the control of one man who is not even a member of the committee."

Representative Montague, who is chairman of the Committee on Cities, which favorably reported the teachers' bill, said he favored an increase in the salary of the school teachers, but not at the risk of throwing the whole system out of joint.

Representative Ellis of Newton said that the Governor's veto is a business-like, straightforward statement and should be sustained.

IVERNIA SINKS AT QUEENSTOWN

QUEENSTOWN, Ire., May 25.—The Cunard liner Ivernia, which hit Daunt's Rock yesterday, was in the harbor to-day.

The inrush of water through the broken and strained bow plates finally became so great that practically all of the bulkheads gave way and every compartment was flooded. As she filled, the great liner slowly settled and sank until only her spars, funnels and upper works were above the waters of the harbor.

Experts who carefully examined the ship said that after the apertures had been plugged up, the ship could be pumped out and floated into dry dock for repairs.

N. Y. MUTUAL LIFE BUILDING, SCENE OF DEATH FALL

Dotted line shows path of Thomas Lynn' face-story fall at the corner of Milk and Pearl streets.

FELL 5 STORIES TO HIS DEATH

Thomas Lynn fell to death from the fifth floor level of the New York Mutual Life building, at Milk and Pearl streets, to-day while trying to walk along a footwide ledge between two windows to save himself the trouble of going by the inside route.

Lynn was a porter and was washing windows.

He shot down sixty-eight feet to the Pearl street sidewalk. He struck the sidewalk with a thud close to the curb. The impact fractured his skull and thighs and one leg. He died in an ambulance on the way to the Grace Hospital without recovering consciousness.

Not one in the building saw the man fall. The first that pedestrians about the corner knew was when he landed in a crushed heap on the sidewalk.

A crowd collected instantly. The time was 8:45. At that hour the business district is busy with clerks and stenographers on their way to work at 9 o'clock. Women screamed and men shuddered when they saw the body and realized what had happened.

Lynn was twenty-one years old, single and lived with his sister, Mrs. William Burns, at No. 308 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown. He had worked as porter in the building six months. He had washed windows regularly as part of his duties.

In his window work Lynn used no straps or other safety device. The window sills on the Mutual Life building are very broad. The one on the fifth floor where Lynn was at work has a sill four and one-half feet in width. Lynn stood on this sill and cleaned the window without being exposed to any unusual danger, so long as he kept his head.

Examination of the window sill and of the ledge, running around the building at the fifth-floor level showed what looked like a heel mark on the end of the ledge nearest the window Lynn had just washed. It was thought that Lynn, having finished this window, started to walk along the short ledge to the next window, which would save him the bother of coming through the window into the office and going out through the next window. It was not known in the building whether Lynn had tried that dangerous trick before, but the heel mark on the ledge was fresh and was taken as an indication that the porter had stepped there.

FAMOUS WOMEN IN BULL CASE

ALFRED, Me., May 25.—Revelations of the most amazing character are being made in the contest of the will of the late Mrs. Ole Bull relative to the Hindu love cult that had its home in Brattle street, Cambridge, on the street where President Eliot lives and in the shadow of Harvard University.

As the priestess of the weird, Oriental, incense-burning philosophy of Raja Yogi were described with much graphic detail by Nicola Roberto, formerly a Somerville barber, but who later became one of the great awe-inspiring psychic forces of the occult coterie, it seemed incredible that women of the national character of Mrs. May Wright Sewall, formerly the head of one of the International Council of Women; Miss Sarah J. Farmer, formerly president of the Greenacre Conference in Maine; Mrs. Ole Bull and many others were its most ardent devotees.

Need for Missionaries.

In the light of what happened in the cultured city of Cambridge, as the Bull trial has revealed it, it would appear that there is a greater field for Christian missionary work of a common sense character right here at home than there is in India.

The followers of Swami Vivekananda had mental and physical experiences that were shocking in their results. Stories of mental torture which women believers have suffered in heart-breaking vigils that lasted all night long, in their efforts to banish baneful influences, were told in some of the letters that have been read at the trial.

Some of the women became actually terror stricken at the ghastly, unpalpable figure of evil that emanated from the minds of some of their sisters in the faith. They became nervous wrecks, their minds abnormal.

Roberto the barber-psychic declared on the witness stand that the curious and paralyzing effect of the Hindu priests drove Mrs. Bull insane. Another woman, made ill by the practices, was finally sent to an asylum for the insane.

Student Loses Mind.

Roberto testified to-day that when Miss Farmer lost her mind as a result of the Raja Yogi studies that they used to tie her down and leave her while they tried to treat the pitiful wound with psychic methods at the Eliot, Me. home of Mrs. Bull.

Attorney Charles K. Cobb of counsel for those who are seeking to have the will confirmed introduced two letters written by Roberto to Mrs. Bull in reference to his care of Miss Farmer.

HARVARD MAN GLIDES TO EARTH WITH CRASH

R. M. Allen, a Harvard student, who is to take part in the aviators' meet at the Aviation Park in Squantum to-morrow, started experimenting to-day with a glider built in Cambridge. He descended on the twenty-five feet glide from which the gliders are to start, but his machine failed to take the air and was smashed when it bumped the ground at the bottom. Allen was not hurt. The meet will be an intercollegiate affair.

SEEK MISSING BANK CASHIER

SOUTHBRIDGE, May 25.—No trace has been obtained of Ernest D. Hamilton, cashier of the Southbridge National Bank, who mysteriously vanished from the sight of his friends on Tuesday. His books are straight and no reason is known for his disappearance unless it is a recurrence of an attack of loss of memory from which he suffered three years ago.

Hamilton left the bank Tuesday at 3 p. m., took a trolley car on his way to Springfield to take an afternoon train out of that city for Greenfield, and has mysteriously disappeared.

Judge Henry J. Field, Thomas Manning, chief of police, and James A. Whitbeck, all personal friends of the missing man, went from Greenfield to Springfield last evening in the auto of Judge Field, visiting the police hospitals, hotels and station agents, officials in Northampton, Holyoke and Springfield, endeavoring to locate the missing man. They heard Hamilton was seen at Brightfield, on the trolley line near Palmer, about 4 p. m.

Judge Field, Chief Manning and Mr. Whitbeck went back to Greenfield. They or other friends kept the wires hot during the night. Finally it was learned that Hamilton had been seen on Main street, Springfield, shortly after 7 p. m. Tuesday. There is no clew to his movements later than about 5. The conductor of the train leaving Springfield at 6:35 p. m. thinks that Hamilton was on his train, but is not certain.

TENNEY TRADES FOR STEINFELD

Manager Tenney of the Rustlers closed a deal this morning whereby the Boston team will get Harry Steinfeld, the former third baseman of the Chicago Cubs, from the St. Paul Club of the American Association. The Rustlers will give up Arthur Butler, who is now playing third base, and Dick Clarke, who was replaced in left field by Scotty Ingerton.

Steinfeld is a great third baseman and just a man that will bolster up the Rustler infield. He was sent to St. Paul early this season by Manager Chance, but he is far from all in. He is now on his way to Boston and it is expected that he will arrive to-morrow and will be put in the game immediately. Clarke and Butler will leave for the West right away.

THREE POUND BASS IN RECORD TIME

OXFORD, May 25.—Dr. Charles W. Lynn claims the weight and time record for bass fishing. He landed a three-pound five-ounce beauty in seven minutes after h's hook struck the water. The doctor quit right there. "It was fishing for pickerel in Lowell's pond," says the latter, "my hook hardly struck when the line went out with a whiz. There was a brisk fight and then I landed a big bass."

DIAZ RESIGNS AFTER RIOTS

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—President Diaz will retire from office this afternoon. This announcement was made by the foreign office after a night of wild rioting, in which twenty-five were killed. The provisional government will assume charge at once.

The situation is extremely critical. The mob is temporarily held in check. Unless the public knows certainly within a few hours that Diaz is out, another outbreak is expected. And it is openly feared that when Diaz gets out life and property will be wiped out by the frenzied masses.

Americans and other foreigners are fleeing for their lives. Unless the rioting is quelled within the next twenty-four hours it is believed that the American soldiers waiting on the border will be obliged to hasten to this city and to other sections of the State to restore order.

The clash between the mob and the government soldiers that left at least twenty-five dead in the streets and many wounded last night, may be resumed at any minute.

A mob of 10,000 people cried "Death to Diaz" and "Death to all foreigners."

A feeling of terror prevails in the city. The eyes of the world are to-day turned anxiously toward Mexico. The gravest apprehension is felt by other countries for the life and property of their subjects.

Little Faith in Troops.

Americans have little faith in the soldiers and the police. They are fleeing from the city as fast as the limited transportation facilities will permit. Trebled prices are offered for special trains and automobiles to carry the families of the wealthy beyond the borders of this country.

The aristocracy of Mexico are making hurried, frantic departures for Europe and other asylums of safety. They fear death from the incoming revolutionary followers.

The mass of people, who have been cowed for years by the strong military arm of Diaz, were inflamed to-day when La Patria printed a story headed:

"Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, million for million."

It became know that it is the intention of former President Diaz to sail for Europe. But he may not be able to do this, as the railroad connections from this city are cut.

Fear is expressed even for the life of the aged soldier and statesman. The shooting down of the Madero's in the shadow of the Diaz residence has caused an ugly feeling against the former head of the government.

Stores Are Barricaded.

"Viva Madero! Down with Diaz!" That was the cry that filled the surcharged atmosphere to-day.

The restless crowd, surging about the city, is ready to do violence of any character, so high is the feeling. Many of the frenzied people in the streets are women. They are particularly bitter because of their treatment in the past.

The residence of Diaz is heavily guarded and a strong attempt may be made against his life. The old soldier is calm. He is not afraid of the result, he has told his friends, and those who know him say that he is only concerned for the safety of his dear and dear ones.

Over a Score Killed.

The police to-day estimated that over twenty-five persons were killed in the riots during the hours when darkness fell last night. Many more are suffering from serious injuries. Scores were trampled on and run up by the police, and scores were beaten with clubs or stones or trampled on when the mounted police charged the mobs.

That the government fears that the greater part of the army is disloyal was JUAREZ, May 25.—"President Diaz and his advisers are alone responsible for the bloodshed in Mexico City," declared General Madero to-day. The forces of Diaz are ready to proceed with the reforms decided upon in the peace conference. I expect both Diaz and Corral to retire at once. The existing peculiar situation in the provisional government that the people are not to be trifled with. Madero is making preparations to get to the capital.

HAVANA, May 25.—General Bernado Reyes to-day received a dispatch from Minister de la Barra in Mexico City calling upon him to return home and aid in the organization of the Mexican government. He said that he would not leave until the call was approved of by Madero.

HIT BY "L" BEAM, SCALP CUT OPEN

Joseph Martell, forty, of No. 28 South street, Somerville, was severely hurt to-day when a beam, weighing one hundred pounds, fell upon him from the extension of the elevated structure. He was picked up with a lacerated scalp and possible internal injuries and taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital in a police ambulance.

MRS. MORSE TO CONTINUE FIGHT

Efforts to free Charles W. Morse, the banker, from the federal prison at Atlanta, where he is serving a fifteen-year term, will be renewed at once by Mrs. Morse, aided by hundreds of friends in Boston and other parts of the country. Mrs. Morse, who conducted the heroic fight to secure a pardon for her husband, is not discouraged by the action of President Taft in declining to open the prison doors to Morse. Her Boston friends declare that she is still confident of shortening the term of the banker.

Her new fight will be a campaign to secure a commutation of Morse's sentence. President Taft, in denying the application for a pardon, gave permission for renewal of the application after January 1, 1913. Mr. Morse will not wait until then.

Secured Million Names.

For many months Mrs. Morse, broken-hearted over the imprisonment of her once wealthy and powerful husband, put up a ceaseless fight in his behalf, traveling back and forth across the continent enlisting the aid of hundreds of noted men and women in her husband's behalf and securing signatures to petitions for his pardon which amounted to total nearly 1,000,000.

The petition to the President to pardon Morse was handled by G. A. A. Peyser, Boston attorney, who resides in Cambridge. He said that while he was greatly disappointed at President Taft's action that all hope was not yet lost. James T. Morse, uncle of the imprisoned banker, and Miss Morse's daughter to-day said that renewed efforts would be made to at least have the sentence of Banker Morse lightened.

Walsh Petition Denied.

President Taft denied both the Morse petition and that of John H. Walsh of Chicago. They are the two most prominent bankers ever convicted and sent to federal penitentiaries for offenses against banking laws. Not only did the President refuse to pardon either Morse or Walsh, but he also declined at this time to commute in any other sort or degree the sentences imposed upon the two men by the courts in which they were convicted.

LAST LAP DAYS OF BIG CONTEST

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Only six days left!

On Wednesday next, May 31, at 10 p. m. the special May offer in connection with the AMERICAN'S $35,000 prize contest will expire.

At the same time the polls will be closed to compile the new list of candidates' standing, with vote totals, which is to be printed on Sunday, June 11.

This means that candidates have less than a week now in which to turn in votes by subscription for the May special and also to boost their standing before the new list appears.

In addition to this dual incentive, candidates who work with renewed energy now will strengthen their position in the main contest which now has only three more weeks to run. The main contest will end on Thursday, June 8. The day will settle the grand competition for the $8,000 house and two lots at Hingham-on-the-Charles and for the 999 other prizes in their $35,000 race.

The one thing for candidates to do now is to rush in votes and particularly votes by subscription. It is subscriptions that count and subscriptions only in this May special.

Forty-two prizes, aggregating $1,050 in value, are offered in the forty-two candidates polling the most votes By SUBSCRIPTION between May 24 and May 31, up to 10 p. m., inclusive.

CARS DROP 25 FEET TO RIVER

TILTON, N. H., May 25.—Three cars of a Boston & Maine freight train jumped the tracks at the bridge in the centre of the town early to-day and dropped twenty-five feet into the river. Three more cars were piled up at one end of the bridge, cutting off traffic on the main street. The fact that the farmer happened to be out of his shanty for a few minutes saved his life. The cars struck his shanty and carried it into the river.

The wreck occurred at 5:15, when a long through train from Woodsville was passing through the town. Most of the cars in the centre of the train jumped the tracks and broke away from the rest of the train. This car and two others toppled over into the river. Traffic on the White Mountain division of the Boston & Maine was tied up for several hours on account of the wreck.

O'Meara Advises His Successor

"The police department regards the BUSINESS OF VICE as a social tragedy which has GONE ON FROM THE BEGINNING AND PRESUMABLY WILL CONTINUE TO GO ON TO THE END; but police action against it is confined, of necessity to the ATTEMPTED enforcement of the laws. The police have no other mission or authority, and their efforts to reduce the PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS, to secure the adequate punishment of those who engage in it, and thus to check its growth, have met with practically no helpful or appreciative response from any direction.

"If a FUTURE POLICE COMMISSIONER were intending to pursue the same course with respect to the business of vice that has been followed for years, I SHOULD ADVISE HIM THAT HE MIGHT EXPECT loyal support from the police when once he had convinced them that he was in earnest; LITTLE ENCOURAGEMNT FROM COURTS; bitter hostility from persons whose profits were curtailed; INDIFFERENCE FROM THE PUBLIC; AND FROM A FEW ENTHUSIASTS IN THE CAUSE OF SOCIAL PURITY, WHOSE ADMIRABLE PURPOSES ARE NOT SUSTAINED BY STRAIGHT AND INTELLIGENT THINKING, HE WOULD BE SURE TO RECEIVE SOME MEASURE OF ABUSIVE CRITICISM.

"I should advise him that unless he held his oath of office in high regard, and cared for no reward other than the consciousness that he had done his duty faithfully and with some benefit to the community, IT WOULD BE BETTER FOR HIM PERSONALLY THAT HE SHOULD FOLLOW THE EASY ROAD OF INDIFFERENCE, which is always chosen by those who are officially blind."—From the 49th annual report of the Police Commissioner to the Governor, December 30, 1910.

ARCHBOLD MUST PAY FOR DEATH

NEW BEDFORD, May 25.—John F. Archbold, son of the millionaire of the Standard Oil Company who directs that organization for John D. Rockefeller, must pay $6,000 to the parents of Guilherme De Mello, a seven-year-old girl who was killed by the Archbold automobile in Mattapoisett.

The child was run down July 23, 1908. She died several days later, and for several years the Archbold attorneys kept the case in the courts. The suit was brought, it was said, after the millionaire, who had been at the child's bedside in the hospital, made objection to an undertaker's bill which was presented to him.

Finally William De Mello, father of the girl, succeeded in getting the case tried and John F. Archbold was forced to appear.

The children were hurried to the hospital. Emil had sustained a fracture of the skull. Edgar, a sturdy boy, lingered till 5 a. m. to-day. The other children, though not so badly hacked as Edgar, were said by the surgeons to have no chance for life.

MOTHER HACKS HER 3 BABIES

PROVIDENCE, May 25.—Mrs. Beatrice J. Potter was brought into court today to be committed to the Butler hospital for the insane after inflicting fatal wounds with an axe on her three babies.

Five-year-old Edgar, the eldest of the little victims, died early today in the Rhode Island State Hospital.

The deaths of three-year-old Gladys and of Lillian, fourteen months old, are expected any moment.

Joseph A. Potter, the husband and father, has not recovered from the horror which overwhelmed him when he learned the dreadful tragedy.

Is Declared Insane.

Mrs. Potter was given a preliminary examination by Medical Examiner Clifford S. Potter. To-day Dr. Potter officially pronounced the woman insane. Steps were taken to secure her immediate commitment. insane.

The Potter home where the tragedy occurred is at No. 87 Waseran avenue. Mrs. Potter has been in ill health since the birth and death of her fourth child, three weeks ago. Earlier in the week she tried to choke one of the three children. She was discovered in time. Potter made arrangements for an attendant to live with them. Meanwhile he remained at home to guard against any further outbreak by his wife.

Attacks Babies With Axe.

Potter went out to get shaved at 8 o'clock in the evening. While he was away Mrs. Potter attacked her babies with a long-handled axe as they were asleep. She chopped at their heads in insane frenzy. None of the children were killed outright.

Then Mrs. Potter went to a window and called to Mrs. Sarah F. Holdgate, a neighbor. Mrs. Holdgate found the children in the blood-stained bed, with gaping wounds in their heads.

Mrs. Holdgate ran out screaming. The police were called. Mrs. Potter was found in a dazed condition in the kitchen. She made no resistance when taken to the station.

Mrs. Holdgate recalled later that when Mrs. Potter took her into the bedroom the mother said calmly:

"Come and see what I have done to my babies."

GETS WEDDING RING LOST 18 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Oscar Olsen of Quincy is a happy woman ever finding her wedding ring, which she lost eighteen years ago. When Mrs. Olsen lost her ring shortly after her marriage she lived on Parker street. One day the ring was missing. How it was lost she never knew. She moved away from Parker street. The present occupant of Mrs. Olsen's former home hired a man to fix up a flower garden. He dug up some old roots, when his attention was attracted to a bright object, which proved to be a ring. He discovered the initials engraved inside, which revealed Mrs. Olsen's ownership, and restored the wedding token to her.

Something About Glycerin

Glycerin is a preservative and antiseptic, and because of its softening, soothing properties is valuable in treating scalp and skin disorders.

It also increases the solvent power of water.

Glycerin is one of the ingredients in Birt's Head Wash, and that is why the Wash penetrates the scalp pores before water is applied, and why the scalp, when cleansed with it, is left in such a delightful condition. Besides glycerin, Birt's Head Wash contains free cocoanut oil, white of eggs and a small quantity of salicylic acid to prevent disagreeable odors that often are found on the hair.

This formula is one that everybody can understand and appreciate, because each ingredient is known to be most excellent for the hair and scalp.

When combined as they are in Birt's Head Wash, the result is an antiseptic shampoo that is ideal and perfect in every respect.

In hygienic tubes 25c., at all druggists.

SENATE OPPOSED TO MEASURES PASSED IN DEMOCRATIC HOUSE

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—I return to Washington to find the public sentiment of the capital a fulfilment of the forecast which I sent to the AMERICAN ten days ago.

It is at this time a generally accepted fact that the differences between the Senate and the House of Representatives on vital measures affecting the people are inconceivable.

In other words, the disagreement between the Democratic House and Republican Senate will have to be referred to the American people at the ballot box.

There is a good chance, but by no means a certainty, that the popular elections bill will pass the Senate without the Bristow amendment, which was the Sutherland amendment of the last session.

Certainly no braver and better fight has been made by a sincere and loyal statesman than Senator Borah has made for the popular elections bill. Decidedly had such a man to fight for it in the Senate as Borah has fought for popular elections, its prospects would be better than they are to-day.

Chance for Reciprocity.

There is also a chance for Canadian reciprocity, but not so good a chance as that for popular elections. The President still believes the bill will pass if it comes to a vote in the Senate. He is said to rest this belief on the opinion that the strong Democratic support in the Senate joined to the administration influence, which will be doubled in its pressure at the last moment, may bring reciprocity through by a close poll.

But after popular elections and reciprocity comes chaos.

There does not seem at this time to be a shadow of hope that the Senate will pass the farmers' free list, admit Arizona and New Mexico upon the Democratic plan or reform the wool and cotton schedules.

We are getting nearer to the presidential election now and on the line of the national conflict gathers upon the mass of senators the meaning of the people and the people's will fades into the distance.

The public and Senate are likely to lock horns on every important legislative proposition. Even Canadian reciprocity will be fiercely fought and amendments will be made by which its enemies hope to kill it.

The old guard of the Republican party in the Senate is absolutely hostile to reciprocity and will spare no effort to destroy it. Even some of those Republics who would have favored it last session are showing indications of decided opposition now. This old guard have stimulated their partisanship to the extent of indifference to the popular will.

Defy Public Opinion.

They are not even to be frightened over the prospect that the country will hold the Republican Senate responsible for the failure of reciprocity. They believe their party will forgive them for defeating this bill, because its passage is to make the party fortunes of the Democratic party.

The Arizona statehood bill will also be fiercely fought in the Senate. The hundred of Bailey Democrats will join with Root and the Republicans to oppose it.

The passage of this Arizona bill by the House raises the very interesting question as to whether the Democratic House had indorsed by its overwhelming vote for and soon the initiative, the referendum and the recall, which is the basis of contention in the admission of that State.

It is at least significant that without any regard to the sharpness of the issue raised on this point, and without regard to the eloquent speech made in opposition to these measures, the House, in a full understanding, passed the measure by a two to broken majority. It looks cheerful for the party attitude toward these more vital elements of a progressive Democracy.

The revision of the wool schedule as suggested in forecast of the House caucus called for June 5 has not a ghost of a show of receiving the attention of the Senate at the present time.

Sharp Antagonism.

The parties are fairly aligned now and in sharp antagonism over these public questions. It is Democrat against Democrat, party against party for 1912, and from this time forth every public question, which has heretofore been considered with comparative honesty and impartiality, will take more and more the fine and temper of party politics and of presidential bearing.

Meanwhile, I am more and more convinced that every friend of reciprocity sought to speak definitely and with emphasis to the American Senate on behalf of that measure.

The "listeners" have spoken in thousands. Every mother's son of those who have a personal and private interest to be affected by this righteous Canadian pact have presented their objections into the ears of the Senate through the Finance Committee. That small section of the agricultural population which has been led to oppose reciprocity has been fallied out to express their opposition.

Meanwhile the vast public interests which are united and vitally concerned in this great movement which is to make the first great break in the scale of high prices of living, has remained unorganized and silent and therefore ineffective.

If these great interests desire to have the reciprocity bill they had better begin now and speedily to bring the thunder of public opinion to bear on the American Senate.

READY FOR FUN AT FALL RIVER

Fall River business men are rapidly completing their plans for the Cotton Centennial Carnival, which takes place in that city the week of June 19-24.

The centennial will take up the floor space in four of the largest structures in Fall River, and, moreover, calls for airship flights, regattas, parades, a circus, sports of all kinds and various carnival features. The celebration will be a New England event.

The fourteen committees of members of the Fall River Merchants' Association are hustling to ensure the success of the city's enterprise. Last Sunday the AMERICAN told the story of what the merchants and citizens of Fall River are planning to do.

The carnival plans were announced in detail, and publicity was given to the earnest work being done by the various committees. Their appreciation of this is shown in the following resolutions adopted by the Merchants' Association:

Resolved, that the Fall River Merchants' Association extends a vote of thanks to the publishers of the Boston AMERICAN for the liberal manner in which it has published and is publishing highly helpful articles to help in the successful carrying out of the Cotton Centennial Carnival to be held in Fall River June 19 to 24, 1911.

In adopting this resolution the association feels that it is also expressing the sentiment of all the citizens of Fall River.

(Signed) W. D. WILMOT, Secretary.

FLYING AVIATOR BATTLES EAGLE

PARIS, May 25.—A dispatch from Burgos, Spain, tells of a battle in the clouds between an eagle and Gilbert, the aviator, on his flight over the Cantabrian mountains today in the air race from this city to Madrid. While soaring at a lofty height a gray eagle attacked the aviator, viciously swooping down on the aeroplane and threatening the aviator with beak and talons.

Gilbert's aeroplane needed all his attention, because of treacherous air currents over the mountainous country, and the airman was at a height of 4,000 feet, with the country lying dim beneath him. The great bird circled round and round the aeroplane, evidently believing it a monster member of the bird family. Finally Gilbert managed to draw his revolver and fired two shots at the eagle, driving it off. When the aviator landed at Burgos he declared that the aerial battle with the great bird had given him the most exciting moments of his career.

At one time the eagle attacked Gilbert so fiercely that the aviator had to take his hands off the levers and momentarily lost control of the machine. It was at this time that the airman drew his revolver. The first shot went wild, but frightened the bird and the second struck it. Gilbert regained control of his machine just in time to keep it from crashing to the ground.

Flight Over Mountains.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, May 25. The Paris-to-Madrid air race entered its third and most difficult stage to-day with the flight from this city to Madrid, the finish point. M. Gilbert was the first aviator to get away upon this most perilous flight, ascending at 6.28 a. m. and soaring away toward the southwest. Garros got away at 7.12 and Vedrine started four minutes later. All made good starts.

The flight from this city to the Spanish capital constitutes a journey as hazardous as the trans-Alps contest, in which Chavez lost his life last Fall. It necessitates crossing the ranges of the Pyrenees, which the aviator must maintain an altitude of 4,000 feet. The ranges are wild and bleak and but sparsely populated.

The three airmen who arrived here spent much of their time since their arrival studying the country they had to traverse. The distance from San Sebastian to Madrid in a straight line is approximately 215 miles, although the aviators anticipated that they would be compelled to make many turns.

HETTY GREEN IN BIG CHICAGO LAND SALE

CHICAGO, May 25.—Mrs. Hetty Green to-day sold for upward of a million dollars a tract of real estate here which she obtained in 1877 for $100,312.70. The land lies in the Gage Park section, entirely unimproved. The purchasers were Dyke & McKinnon. The property was taken over by Mrs. Green from Sarah Gage thirty-four years ago on an unsatisfied mortgage and has lain idle while the neighborhood has been improved by others, Mrs. Green fought every additional burden of taxation.

BAKERS OPEN PUBLIC STORES

With the opening of twenty-five "public stores," in which union-made bread can be bought, in Chelsea, East Boston, West End, Roxbury and Malden, the members of Hebrew Bakers' Union No. 45 of Boston, who have been out on strike for an eight-hour day since May 8, feel confident that the boss bakers will be brought to terms.

The nine co-operative bakeries formerly started by the strikers are also running and bosses in no good fact the men are working in each place on shifts of eight hours a day.

When the "public stores" were opened today there was no more publicity among the strikers. The strike affected 185 of them, and as a result of the new stores only 100 of them are working. The main "public store" was chosen at a conference of Jewish organizations last week when the members pledged themselves to help the strikers by opening such stores.

Encouragement was given the members of the union today when it was announced by Max Kaminisky, organizer of Bakers' Union No. 100 of New York, that of the 1,000 members had pledged themselves to contribute to the strike fund a week until the strike is settled.

Double Legal Stamps will be given with every purchase mornings, until 12 o'clock, at Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner Hanover and Portland streets.

A Want Ad. often leads to fortune.

OH, YES! THERE WILL BE PLENTY OF FUN FREE

ALL'S FREE AT MUNICIPAL BALL

Every Dorchester chap, showing any class, has asked his girl to go with him to the Municipal ball on Dorchester Day, June 10.

Having made a good start, the same chaps are now breaking their necks to get tickets to the ball.

The ball is free. Get that? Free!

But checking is free. No roughing up an extra dime or fifteen cents to check your hat and her Spring millinery.

Above all—are the boys ready?—above all, the "eats" are free. It's free all down the line. It's six on the bank-roll, Lena. It's all free. There a clear track for the boys.

Ha! what's that—a red light on the track. Who's holding it? The captain of the Glooms. What are the Glooms trying to do to the Municipal ball?

There's a Gloom Light on Track.

What reads the sign on the banner of the Glooms?—"Maybe everyone can't get a free ticket."

Curses on the Glooms. They're trying to gum up the game.

That's the Gloom fly in the ointment of joy. It's this way: The Municipal dance, the first one ever held in Boston, will be a corner of Norfolk and Morton street, Dorchester. This hall seats 750. It can't dance that many, not comfortably.

Members of the Mattapan Improvement Association will have the tickets for distribution. How many tickets will there be? Some say a thousand. Some say 2,000. How many want to go? Oh, about four or five times that number.

Here's the green light on the track. How to make sure of a ticket, that's the question.

The Mayor will be there. He may sing, if properly approached. He is sure to dance with the prettiest girls and to tell them that Boston girls grow fairer with every passing year.

Mayor There Anyway.

The ball will be a living list of "Who's Who in Dorchester." It will be in charge of John F. Duffy, who is a lawyer and a leader in the Mattapan Improvement Association. Bernard Dorsey will share with Duffy the responsibilities of seeing that all goes well.

The rush for tickets is already on. George Shea has applied for several tickets, to have Charlie Murphy, Louis Lamoie and his brother Abe, "Perry" Martin and Joe Hien are on the application list. The "Upper Roads" will be well represented in this delegation.

GLORIOUS FLAG EASY TO OBTAIN

A man without a flag is as bad as a man without a country. You have a glorious country, America. You should own her flag, the beautiful Stars and Stripes. Handsome five-foot flags are now within the reach of all.

How to get a flag:

Clip seven flag coupons from the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN of consecutive dates. If you wish to have the flag come by mail, send the seven coupons and a postoffice money order for forty-five cents to cover cost of mailing and handling.

If you call for the flag at the Flag Department of the AMERICAN at No. 272 Devonshire street, it will cost you thirty-five cents and seven coupons.

There is no waiting in line at the Flag Department, no delay. The flags are all ready for you, neatly wrapped up. If ordered by mail they will come in stout flat paper envelopes.

Applicants should understand clearly that all mail orders must be addressed to Flag Department, Boston AMERICAN, P. O. Box 3047, Boston.

The AMERICAN is not responsible for money sent through the mail in any form other than Postoffice money order or check. Do not send cash or stamps.

The flag which the AMERICAN gives under this order is of solid woven bunting of highest grade, with colors absolutely fast. The stripes are sewed throughout with double rows of stitches and the corners are solidly fastened. A heavy canvas border, with large brass grommets for ropes, completes it.

For the convenience of AMERICAN readers who live in Providence flags may be obtained from the special AMERICAN agent in Providence, Max Silverstein, at No. 23 Canal street. He will redeem flag coupons which are BROUGHT to his store, but will supply no mail orders. ALL mail orders must be sent to the Flag Department, P. O. Box 3047, Boston.

GUARDIAN FOR QUIMBY GIRL

Miss Gertrude Marie Quimby, the runaway Rock Bay Latin School girl, who was arrested in New York and brought back to Boston, was today legally placed in the care of Maiselle B. Blake, her guardian, appointed by Judge Grant of the Probate Court at the solicitation of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The girl was not in court when Judge Grant signed the papers, she and her mother, Mrs. Mae H. Werner, being represented by James E. Ewer. Miss Quimby, it was said, was in the city some place in the care of the society.

Just who the girl's guardian is aside from her name, Mr. Ewer would not divulge. The impression gained was that she was a woman selected by the society to take the girl in charge, and that Miss Quimby was not acquainted with her until she met her in Boston after being brought back from New York.

Miss Quimby, it is understood, will remain with her guardian for two or three weeks in seclusion, after which she will be placed in some educational institution, where she will remain until she is eighteen.

Ever accustomed before Judge Grant, shortly after 10 o'clock. He had the petition, filed out asking that Maiselle B. Blake be appointed guardian to Miss Quimby. The paper said that the girl was the daughter of Roscoe C. Quimby, late of Rock Bay, and of Mae H. Werner, formerly Mae H. Quimby. It was stated that the girl was born September 5, 1897, but the place of her birth was not given.

Miss Quimby has declared that she is sixteen years old, but the date of her birth as given by her mother makes her less than fourteen.

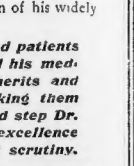
A BOLD STEP



To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds Dr R V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broad-cast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines.

Thus Dr. Pierce has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits and placed them in a class all by themselves by making them remeales OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same.

From this little book it will be learned that Dr Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, overworked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions correcting displacements as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

MRS. SEWALL, NOTED REFORMER AND EDUCATOR, IN BULL CASE

CLUBWOMAN AND PRESIDENT OF MOTHER'S COUNCIL, NAMED IN MYSTIC RITES STORY.

The final letter, dated January 20, 1910, recited kindly that he was taking good care of her, and that she seemed to be improving.

The second was dated Portsmouth, N. H., and after some comment on Roberto's health and the fair weather, said:

"Miss F. is a decided subject for special treatment. Dr. Wills has seen her. I have had some strenuous times with her, with mental and physical suffering, occasionally to the point of distraction."

Attorney Cobb interrupted with the question:

"What did you mean by that?"

"For five or six days at a time I would get no sleep and scarcely a chance to eat.

Contact With Insanity.

Q.—What did you mean by mental suffering? A.—If you have ever come in contact with an insane person you will understand.

Q.—Had you been trying to exercise some psychical control over Miss Farmer? A.—No, not at all.

The letter proceeded in the sentence: "The method of handling the case has been a failure, although it has taken so much out of my vitality," and Mr. Cobb asked:

"What did you mean by that? A.—Before I came there Elliott, Mr. Mrs. Bull's summer placer, they used to tie her down and leave her while they gave her psychical treatment. I gave her more freedom. I used to take her out for walks and give her her breakfast.

"I enforced discipline and required her to be courteous as long as she was not absolutely insane."

The rest of the letter told more of the methods Roberto employed. Mr. Cobb then questioned him to bring out that he had been on a salary at the Cambridge studio at different periods in 1908 and 1909, and was caretaker of the studio when Mrs. Bull took trips to Europe. In October, 1909, Roberto said, Mrs. Bull got back from a trip abroad and agreed to give him $50 a month if he would learn to drive a motor car and do other odd jobs for her.

A letter from Mrs. Otis Bull Vaughn urging to Roberto after he had gone back to Italy was then introduced. It read:

"I enclose some newspaper clippings that will give you an idea of what I have been undergoing here. My poor mother must have been entirely under the control of others for I feel sure that never in her own mind nor of her own free will would she have consented to sign such a document as this will which my uncle and Mr. Parker have filed for probate.

Comes Like Thunderbolt.

"It has come upon me like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, as I felt so assured of my dear mother's love for me and as I know she felt as certain of mine for her.

"I hope there may be no need of any contest, and that my uncle will consent to do what is right."

The letter closed with the request to Roberto that he come here if it should prove necessary, and it inclosed money to pay for any necessary cablegrams from me.

Questioned by Mr. Whipple, Roberto was asked:

"Who expressed the opinion to you that Miss Farmer was abnormal or insane?"

A.—Mrs. Briggs Mrs. Thurber, Mrs. Bouchard, Miss Lesc, Prof. James, Mr. Tatemai, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Macomber and Mrs. Murray.

Q.—While you were in Cambridge with Mrs. Bull how much time was there that she did not have any Yogis, Swamis, Japanese or some other believers in this Indian cult at her house?

Mr. Cobb objected to this question and brought forth this statement from Mr. Whipple:

"We contend that Mrs. Vaughan did not go to her mother's house because she could not stand the people there, while Mr. Cobb says that she was unfilial. We say that she was practically excluded from her mother's home because her mother was under the influence of these people, who made her believe that her daughter brought Mrs. Shapleigh's hostile influence with her."

Declares Daughter Excluded.

"You may answer the question," said Judge Hobbs.

A.—I think so.

Q.—When was she in a very short time in the fall of 1909?" said Roberto.

Q.—How did Mrs. Vaughan arrange for these visits? A.—She either telephoned or wrote. Sometimes Mrs. Bull would say that she was not well enough to see her, sometimes she would say for her to come later and sometimes she would say to come at once.

Q.—When Miss Noble and Dr. and Mrs. Howe were at the home of Mrs. Bull, what room was there for Mrs. Vaughan. A.—There was a room downstairs that opened off of the studio. It had only a curtain for a door. It was used as a guest room.

Q.—Did Mrs. Briggs ever use that room? A.—I think not.

Letters were introduced not only to elaborate the story of the strange rites that were performed at Mrs. Bull's house in Cambridge and the Sumner place at Eliot, Me., but also in an attempt to show that Mrs. Bull's mind, which it is contended was deranged by mystic practises, was completely dominated by companions.

Some of these letters, Attorney Whipple argued, show decay of mental and moral faculties. Others, clearer and to the point, although ostensibly written by Mrs. Bull, were dictated, the daughter's lawyer believes, by Miss Noble, who is now in India. Miss Noble was left $30,000 by Mrs. Bull.

The destructive influence of the Hindu teachings on the women who came under their influence spelt, through the seances in the Bull home, it is asserted, bereft them of their mental powers and injured them in health.

Mrs. Stevens, a prominent member, became possessed of the idea, according to the testimony, that Mary Wright Sewell, prominent in educational circles, was "a veritable demon" and one story was that she had such wonderful powers that she looked at a picture with such force that the eyes moved.

Questioned About Japanese.

Lawyer Sherman L. Whipple questioning Roberto, asked:

Q.—Do you know anything about the Japanese who were occupants of the studio building in Cambridge? A.—Yes, Mrs. Bull told me about them. They were there before I came. She said they had remarkable psychic power. She said that one of them could go into a church and absorb all of the power of the people and then come out and turn it from good to an evil purpose. She said that at first she trusted this Japanese, but afterwards she did not. He was sent away. He left pictures and souvenirs at the studio, but they were destroyed after he left so that he would have no chance to exercise his baleful influence through them. Mrs. Bull said that a Mrs. Priest who had been in the house had been driven almost insane by the Japanese, but that Mrs. Briggs and others concentrated their good influences against the little brown man and frustrated his attempts.

Q.—Where did Mrs. Briggs sleep when she was at the studio building? A.—She and Mrs. Bull slept together most of the time.

Q.—When did Mrs Bull do most of her writing? A.—Usually early in the morning.

Q.—What did Mrs. Bull say in relation to Mrs. Briggs's power in connection with pain and illness? A.—She said that Mrs Briggs could lie in bed alone and take away the pain and illness of others. She said that when she was operated on in the hospital in 1906 Mrs. Briggs lay in bed in the studio building and took all the pain away, so that Mrs. Bull went through the operation in the hospital without feeling it.

Q.—Do you remember a letter that Mrs. Briggs wrote to Mrs. Bull in London in which she said that she took hold of your hands and that she drew all the evil power out of you through your fingers and that it made her ill for two weeks? A.—Yes, I remember her holding my hands, but I took it merely as a friendly matter and didn't feel that she took anything away from me. (Laughter in the court.)

Roberto said that Mrs. Bull seemed to be particular about her food. She said the Hindus could live on a handful of grain a day and she thought she could live on a glass of milk and six ounces of food a day.

Q.—What did Mrs. Bull eat? A.—One day she had oysters and steamed clams when her daughter, Mrs. Vaughan, called. "I don't think they are good for an invalid," Mrs. Vaughan said. Mrs. Vaughan suggested that her mother eat soft boiled eggs and milk toast and Mrs. Bull thanked her for suggesting it. After Mrs. Vaughan left I asked Mrs. Bull if I should prepare her some of the food her daughter suggested, but she said, "Never mind, Mrs Vaughan was not quite herself."

Ate Steamed Clams.

Q.—What did Mrs. Bull say about her relations with her daughter? A.—She said that she and her daughter were estranged partly because Mrs. Shapleigh cut her and her daughter off and partly because Mrs. Vaughan was not in sympathy with her beliefs. I remember that once Mrs. Bull said that Mrs. Vaughan was hypnotized by Mrs. Shapleigh and that she was carrying around the power with her and if she came to the studio building she would bring the hypnotic power with her and leave it behind. Mrs. Bull said that she could not bear it.

Q.—Do you recall a talk in May, 1910? A.—One morning Mrs. Bull was very much excited and she started to talk about Miss Farmer. Her sentences were short and disconnected. She said that Mrs. Farmer, Mrs. Shapleigh and Mrs. Vaughan possessed psychic power.

Q.—Was Mrs. Bull given to moods? A.—Yes, sometimes she was bright, sunny and cheerful, and then in going from one room to another she would suddenly become so angry that you would not approach her. You could hear her yelling, but you had to take what she said and not hold it against her.

Mrs. Bull's Last Days.

Roberto testified that as Mrs. Bull became weaker and nearer death she became more and more irrational. She frequently had the furniture in the house changed because of the mental influence it had on her. Roberto said that he didn't hold her responsible for anything that she did at that time.

Q.—Did Mrs. Bull ever propose a trip abroad? A.—Yes. At one time she planned to sell her house and go to India. She said she would take me with her and that we would go through England, France and Italy.

Mr. Whipple then read the following letter from Mrs. Alberta Stevens to Mrs. Briggs. The letter was sent to Mrs. Bull at the time the attack was being made on Mrs. Sewell. The letter was dated December 6, 1907. It read:

"Dearie, won't you hold some wholesome strengthening for me? I am going through the darkest days I have ever known mentally. The Clarks and the Japanese together would be welcome in comparison with what I am surrounded by.

"I know I am unreasonable and ungrateful and nasty, but I can't help it, although I have really tried. I think I may be going to be ill, and I almost hope I shall if it takes me away from here. I can't run, couldn't even if I were with you. It is the constant encroachment on everything and everybody that my sensitive nature is so affected by."

Sharing Nocturnal Vigils.

"It is 4:30 a. m. I haven't been to bed and I don't intend going. I can at least have a little spot to myself during the wee hours, although the studio room is held in exclusive possession by IT, often till 4 a. m.

"Don't say anything to Mr. Odam, as he would repeat it to Mr. Roberto, who is getting firmly enmeshed in the foxy, catlike wiles. He often shares the nocturnal vigils by special invitation. I feel like a cat myself to be writing in this vein, but you must be the victim of my wrath or I shall burst.

"I do hope matters are running more smoothly with you and that you are relieved from further anxiety regarding your brother's household. I have been everywhere for the brass tongs but cannot find them. When you write to Miss Macomber implore her to come here and see me. Miss Bruchart is the most comforting individual I have seen, but she comes less often now.

"Oh, for the days that are no more! How alive it was when you were putting up preserves in a little kitchen. Not a single jar has been touched. Good bye.

"From your naughty, ill natured little "B."

Mr. Whipple read from a letter written on January 7, 1908, by Mrs. Stevens to Mrs. Bull. The letter was as follows:

"Roberto's Influence Good."

"When Mr. Roberto made up with her he covered the chairs and sofas, but since he severed his connection with the magnetic experiment I haven't quite liked to ask Mrs. Sewall to do this at the close of her very absorbing communion with superphysical forces. I will do so, however, if you so desire.

"The general atmosphere of the house is infinitely more harmonious than it was a few weeks ago. But I have never in all my whole life seen such determination as Mrs. Sewall manifests. Her desires to enlist Mr. Roberto's co-operation in her work knows no bounds and his opposition, while courteously expressed, is equally determined. I had a frank talk with him the other day in which he made me feel as though I had done very wrong

MYSTIC RITES OF THE YOGIS DIVULGED IN COURT

The Mystic Circle of Raja Yogi—"We sat in a line or in a circle and breathed deeply. We tried to breathe entirely through the left nostril and concentrated on it until we felt the breath going way down to kundalina (base of spine."

Swami Vivakananda (Hindoo priest in flowing garments) lectures Bull circle of mystics. Vivakananda later died in spite of the "thought influences" exerted to save him.

Chanting procession, led by Mrs. Briggs, who held candle aloft in right hand. This was one of the favorite rites of the mystics.

Roberto, young Italian member of cult, rubs furniture with olive oil and ammonia to rid it of Mrs. Sewall's influence. Burning incense, too.

Mrs. Sewall, sitting at piano, striking note to fit atmosphere with her power. The mystics were told to exercise the imagination in the most fantastic ways.

SOMERVILLE BARBER TELLS HOW STUDENT OF THE YOGIS LOST HER MIND.

in writing you all the details that were left out when the situation was so painful. If there is one good influence in this house it is Mr. Roberto. I think we all tacitly acknowledge it and respect him accordingly."

The following letter was written by Mrs. Stevens to Mrs. Bull after it was first read to Mrs. Briggs.

Letter from Mrs. Stevens.

"Studio House.

"Dearie—I pause in the midst of many insistent duties to send you a line. Our communications by telephone always leave something to be desired as I am really mistrustful of the upstairs exercises. I am sorry you are disappointed about my not having sent the letter to Mrs. Bull that I read to you on Sunday. Especially when you were at such pains to write yourself. I cannot explain the restraint that has held me back in this matter. I am now in such a condition of doubt that I find it impossible to differentiate between what I know has been operating for evil and what I think may be my own imaginations, thus I feel constrained to give Mrs. Sewall the benefit of any possible doubt.

"When I telephoned Mr. Adams that something bad happened I referred to the fact that Mr. Roberto had spent a very long time with Mrs. Sewall in the large room the night before. He told me the next morning that he was undecided whether he should resume the daily exchange of lessons or not. Feeling that this would be but the entering wedge on her part, and that if he again got her influence, influences would inevitably operate toward my undoing, I couldn't help feeling depressed.

"He has been very kind in one sense, and I shall always be deeply grateful to him, but his prin-ipies are so exalted that human sympathy to him seems unnecessary, and while it is lovely of him to want to put me on such a level that I need only call on the Divine, I am not sufficiently established in my reliance on what comes from the infinite to depend on that alone.

"For me to keep my mental balance here it is absolutely necessary for him to at least remain neutral, which I have grave doubts of his being able to do if he comes under the subtle influence of several hours' companionship with Mrs. Sewall in her own room and therefore under her own controlled vibrations.

Feared Effect on Herself.

"He may be strong enough himself to withstand the evil consequences of such a contact, but though it might pass right over him I fear it would operate most disastrously for me. And I have no right to interfere with what would obviously be of great benefit to him on the practical plane. He impresses me at times as being imbued with the feeling that I have in a measure been responsible for interfering with something that he should have been allowed to work out for himself.

"I think, however, that he was convinced that what attacked me Monday night was not imaginery. I was wild and then afterwards as limp as though I had had a few whiffs of ether. A most unnatural drowsiness overtook me while Mrs. Sewall, Mr. Roberto and I were in the drawing room at tea time. I couldn't seem to shake it off, but was not suspicious of anything unnatural about it until Mr. Roberto himself asked me about it afterwards. I was greatly surprised that he should have noticed it. An hour later after he had gone out to his lesson at the Y. M. C. A. and Mrs. Sewall asked me to come to her room I passed a quarter of an hour in the most awful state of dread I ever experienced.

"I know to refuse to go would mean that I should have to undergo it later, so after positively shivering for some minutes I went up stairs. You can imagine how worked up I was to have asked Morris—who was in the house—not to leave until I came back. I couldn't explain to him, of course, but most unfortunately Mrs. Austin White came in, and while they were alone together she began talking about Mrs. Sewall's queer psychic experiences which she had heard of outside this house, about Mrs. Sewall's praying to a picture cost made by hands, in which the eyes actually moved during her communion with it.

Need for Discernment.

"You may imagine Morris's state of mind. He didn't give me a thought, but four lest Howell should in some way be contaminated worked him up to a high pitch. I cannot go into the details of my interview with Mrs. Sewall, which lasted two hours, with a break of five minutes when I went down stairs to send Morris off and to appeal to Mr. Roberto, who had meanwhile come home. I kept absolutely positive to all Mrs. Sewall's appeals.

"I told her the one quality I was now most in need of was discernment and that I was asking for it night and day. She said I had no discernment whatever because I failed to believe in the sincerity of her affection for me. She asked me point blank over and over again why I didn't like her, asking me if I could look her straight in the eye and deny that I disliked her. She took hold of both my hands. I attempted mildly to withdraw them, but she held in her most affectionate manner, 'Don't refuse me your hands.'

"The most dreadful appeal was for Mrs. Bull, saying I was keeping back the work she had come here to do by my attitude toward her—that in a house where such inharmony dwelt it was impossible for the best work to be accomplished.

"I replied that I didn't wish to be a stumbling block and that I would withdraw. She said that would be the greatest injustice to Mrs. Bull. As I said before, she talked two solid hours, protesting over and over her high opinion of me (generality) and begging me to tell her her faults. She loved everybody, she said, everybody who lived, citing love as an object of particular affection.

"My dear, if I could have believed her, how much easier it would all have been. Never in my life have I so wanted to be just, and never have been so torn with doubt and distrust. But the worst part of it all was after the interview. She kept me till eleven and then said 'We don't seem to be making any progress.' She bade me go immediately to bed. I had to go down stairs to turn out the lights and there I found Mr. Roberto waiting. I had been very positive throughout the interview, but a terrible reaction overtook me and I was never so wrought up in my whole life as during the following hour.

Held Head to Keep Reason.

"I went to my own room and literally held on to my head to keep my reason. If I hadn't felt that Mr. Roberto, who had seen from my manner that something very unusual was hold of me, was holding positive thoughts for me, I don't believe I could have endured the night. Then the next day came the conflict in my own mind regarding the letter to Mrs. Bull. I could go on for sheets more, but it would only be a repetition. If my withdrawal would serve in any way to make things better or more harmonious here, I would certainly go, no matter what inconvenience to my personal advantage. Mr. Odnus says it is my duty to stay. The first of May seems a century off, and even then one is not sure of Mrs. Bull's return.

"My own preparations for Christmas are nothing. I haven't the spirit to put into the season. I have nearly finished the things Mrs. Bull left with me to do for her. If I should ever be convinced that I had been wrong about Mrs. Sewall, that I had misjudged her, life wouldn't be long enough for me to expiate my remorse. It distresses me to think of you being so worried. The physical pain besides all the strength of mind called upon in trying to disentangle this mess.

"Without you and Mrs. Odnus I don't know what I should have done, and I must add Mr. Roberto, too, for he is a donor of strength, but to a detached, impersonal way.

"With best love, always, BERTA.

"December 21, 1907."

More Letters to Come.

A number of letters written by various members of the cult were introduced, among them two attributed to Mrs. Bull. The first one was of such a rambling character that no sense could be made out of it. The second one was concise and to the point. Regarding the second letter, Mr. Wilpole asked Roberto:

Was Miss Noble with Mrs. Bull when she wrote this second letter?

She was, replied Roberto.

I shall introduce more letters, said Mr. Whipple, purporting to have been written by Mrs. Bull and shall argue that they were dictated by Miss Noble.

This testimony lasts directly upon the contention of Mr. Whipple that Mrs. Bull had been induced to such a mental state by her Hindoo practices that she was incompetent when she made her will and that the document was dictated by Miss Noble, who is now in Calcutta, having gone thither since the will contest started.

WHO'S WHO IN YOGI MYSTIC REVELS AS REVEALED AT TRIAL

The number of prominent society women, all rich and aged and well known in Boston, who were mixed up in the riots and revels of the mystic Yogi meetings in Mrs. Ole Bull's studio house in Brattle street, Cambridge, is amazing the spectators at the remarkable will trial at Alfred, Me. Here are some of the characters:

Mrs. Ole Bull, widow of the famous Norwegian violin virtuoso. Prominent in Cambridge society. Died January, 1911, at No. 108 Brattle street, Cambridge.

Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughn, her daughter, who is contesting her will. Amount involved about $128,000.

Dr. Jagadis Chander Bose, president of the Presidency college, Calcutta. Mrs. Bull left him $20,000. Mrs. Vaughn says he influenced her mother.

Miss Sarah Jane Farmer of Dover, N. H. Founded Green Acre conference at Eliot, Me., teaching of advanced thought. Entertained most noted religious seekers at the conference. Said to have lost reason through over industrious study of occultism.

Edwina Vaughn, daughter of Mrs. Vaughn, whose spirit, it was said, had grown to womanhood in another world and who had become a great musician.

Nicolo Roberto, a handsome Sicilian. Came here in 1901. Was a barber in Somerville and ran billiard hall in Providence. Pupil of Mrs. Bull and later leader of the mystic cult.

Mary Wright Sewall, honorary president International Council of Women. Said to have power to look at a picture and make its eyes move.

"DEATH TO DIAZ" SHOUTS OF MOB

shown be the fact that only a few of the soldiers in the barracks were ordered out, the authorities relying chiefly on the mounted police. Many of these come from the section of the country that has ever been loyal to Diaz.

While 10,000 persons were packed into Zocalo Plaza, directly in the centre of the town, demanding the death of Diaz and the immediate accession of Madero to the presidency, a heavy rain began falling. This was of great help to the police, the water cooling the ardor of the mob. They were finally scattered, however, through the side streets, but not before many of them had been killed or injured.

Heavy damage was done by the mobs as they swept across and fro. Practically all the windows in the central part of the city were smashed except those protected by the steel shutters raised by their owners in anticipation of the event. Street cars were halted and lifted from the tracks.

Threaten to Fire City.

Flaming torches were carried by many, and they threatened to set the city afire. Cooler heads prevailed, however, and the horror of a conflagration was averted.

Henry Lane Wilson, United States Ambassador, called at the National Palace to pay his respects to President Diaz. Though he was unable to see the President, he was received by Senora Diaz, who expressed the regret that her husband was too ill to see him.

While the two were conversing the National Palace guards were drawn up around the palace and when Ambassador Wilson left he met part of the mob marching on the palace. The Ambassador was greeted with "vivas" and several lighter befuddled revolutionists struck their hands through the carriage window to be shaken.

It was immediately after this that the order broke out in many parts of the city. It centred about the palace, however, the mob seeing and calling for the resignation of Diaz. That the authorities were disorganized was shown by the fact that there was no guide apparent in the early evening, an drove up in a carriage carrying a banner on which was displayed the large portrait of Madero.

Girl Leads the Mob.

Leaving the carriage, the girl placed herself before the mob and called upon them to follow her. With cheers the mob obeyed and marched about the palace, their number being constantly increased.

While the mob besieged the palace, scenes of riot were being enacted in the Chamber of Deputies. The galleries were packed with men and women who acted "Where is the resignation?" and hissed the various deputies who spoke on the questions before them. Finally the sitting had to be abandoned and the occupants of the galleries poured forth to swell the ranks of the rioters.

SCHOOL CADETS MARCH FRIDAY

All is in readiness for the greatest event in the year for the Boston schoolboy, the annual parade of the high school cadets, who march to-morrow, 3,500 strong, through the streets of downtown Boston. The parade starts at 9:30 a.m.

The honor of acting as brigadier-general in command of the parade will be shared by the five colonels in command of the five regiments. Three colonels are to review the parade. Two will march at the head in command.

The most coveted office is to be held by Wallace McNaught, who was colonel of the First Regiment, E. H. S., in 1910, and tomorrow is brigadier-general in command of the unit during the final manoeuvres on the Common.

Latin School at Head.

The line of march is from the corner of Clarendon street and Columbus avenue. The familiar figure of Colonel George H. Benson will be seen riding at the head, military instructor of the cadets.

Boston Latin School has the honor of leading the parade to-day, and to-morrow it will be in command of Colonel L. J. Ready, who acts as brigadier-general down the Dorchester Park course. Colonel Joseph H. Murray of the 3rd Regiment, English High School, assumes command at this point. His regiment is composed of the smallest boys in line. The little fellows each year seem smaller and smaller to the former pupils in high school.

Parade Thrice Reviewed.

Down Boylston, to Tremont to Brom field the parade will pass. It turns down Washington and proceeds up School street. On the steps of City Hall will be Mayor Fitzgerald, himself a former officer, once the proud head of the Latin School regiment. With the acting brigadier-general, Colonel William G. Brooks of the Fourth Regiment, he will review the cadets. The highest honor possible to an undergraduate officer belongs to Colonel Louis F. Zeppler, First Regiment, E. H. S. He will stand on the steps of the State House and review the parade with Governor Foss as it comes up Beacon street and goes by to the Common.

200 AUTO MEN ON FALMOUTH TRIP

By J. C. KERRISON.

At a meeting of the Boston Truck Association yesterday, many matters affecting the future of the organization were considered at length, but nothing of public interest was transacted. The committee on the motor truck run rendered a progressive report, which received favorable consideration.

Chairman Stevens of the Runs and Tours Committee of the Bay State Automobile Association, says that already over 100 persons have signified their intentions to participate in the Spring outing to Falmouth, on June 17 and 18. He has no doubt, whatever, that at least 200 members and friends will participate in this outing.

In order that proper arrangements may be made, it is necessary, however, for him to receive, as early as possible advice from those who intend participating in this pleasure trip.

The Bostonians will start for Indianapolis, the scene of the 500-mile sweepstake race, to-morrow. The first man to get away will be Frank Wing of the Marmon, who goes first to Cleveland and then to Indianapolis to help cheer the Marmon team in its work.

J. D. Judd, of the Jackson Company, leaves here to-morrow for Indianapolis, where he goes as a reserve driver of the Jackson team.

Mr. C. F. Whitney leaves on Sunday, and will arrive at the carling surface in sufficient time to give to Harry Grant and the Abbs the best wishes of his best of friends in and around Boston.

An informal inspection of the new building of the Diamond Rubber Company of New York at No. 867 Boylston street, Boston, will be made this afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock by all interested.

Manager Edwin Pierce Weber will act as host and has so arranged his force of assistants that it will be possible to give the visitors an adequate idea of every detail of this—the latest and most complete building to be dedicated to motoring and its branches in this city.

The Whitten-Gilmore Company received, this morning, a telegram from Albany, announcing the arrival there of Harry Dayton's three-ton truck with a full load, which it is transporting from Chicago to New York. The telegram announces that on Tuesday and Wednesday, the truck was forced to drive over the worst kind of roads and through rain storms that lasted all day long. Yet, nevertheless, the car performed its work admirably and came through without the slightest difficulty.

BOOM CANADIAN PACT AT DINNER

A vice-presidential boom for Henry L. Stimson, new Secretary of War, was started here when Senator Fred J. Macleod introduced him as the principal speaker at the annual Empire Day Banquet of the International Club. Dispatches from Washington had stated that Stimson's entrance into the cabinet put him in line to be Taft's running mate in the next campaign and the diners gave him a tremendous ovation. Mr. Stimson acknowledged the tribute but said the report should not be taken too seriously. He spoke on reciprocity. The Canadian Minister of the Interior, Frank Oliver; Mayor Fitzgerald, Brigadier-General Gardiner W. Pearson, George Lyman, president of the Canadian Club here; Joseph Israel and Armand Bedard, president of the Historical French-American Society and Sharon Graham, president of the Canadian Club of New York were other speakers.

Secretary Stimson balanced the arguments in favor of the reciprocity agreement made by President Taft as the arguments of "broad and lofty national interest" and as appropriate to the statesmanship "which can contend with mere tip service to party formulas, recognizes the economic and social facts and tendencies of to-day and makes wide provision in respect to them."

Frank Oliver, Canadian Minister of the Interior, after praising Boston as a symbol of past and future history, gave interesting figures relating to the great growth in Canada, especially in the prairie provinces, during the last few or fifteen years. He declared that these figures showed that Canada was growing to be a great power and hence the question of reciprocity was of growing importance to the United States.

He declared that the Canadian interest in reciprocity lay in the fact that Canada was yearly producing a greater surplus of products and needed a market in which to sell the surplus. On the other hand, he said, there would be a corresponding benefit to the people of the United States.

He would prefer, he declared, a reciprocity system which increases the cost of living which taxes the people severely, is not in sound economics, and should not be supported in this civilized age. We in Canada look to see this; that when an abnormal condition exists because of a certain tariff, that tariff should be removed and become economic, so that both parties will be benefited. This tariff agreement is sound economics and sound politics, and will give profit to both the United States and Canada.

BOSTON GIRL IN "KISS WALTZ"

Reno has yielded another beauty to the matrimonial market. She is Miss Lalitta Wiggins, who dresses gorgeously and speaks four lines in "The Kiss Waltz" at the Shubert Theatre. Miss Wiggins, who is a Boston girl, finds her new surroundings rather familiar, as she had ventured into theatricals a few years ago, only to desert the stage after a brief visit, when Benjamin Platt Wiggins urged her to the altar. Now she forsakes Wiggins and returns for her first love. Miss Wiggins arrived from Reno this week and met J. J. Shubert, who made a part for her in "The Kiss Waltz."

Outside of the stock houses but one new attraction will arrive in town next week. "The Red Rose," with Valeska Suratt, will move into the Tremont Theatre for an extended stay. Miss Suratt will bring a real Summer show to Boston, if you can believe what has been said about "The Red Rose."

One of the early attractions at the Castle Square Theatre will be "Little Lord Fauntleroy," with Miss Henrietta Melton playing the title role. Mr. Craig is reviving this delightful little play at the request of hundreds of his patrons.

With the performances of "Judy O'Hara" at the Hollis Street Theatre on Saturday that house will close for the season. The Hollis has had a prosperous year, and was conspicuous as the chief storm centre of the season in theatricals, when "The Easiest Way" met an untimely death at the hands of Mayor Fitzgerald and Commissioner O'Meara.

The regular season at Bass Point and Nahant will open next Saturday, when the hosts that go there these points enter upon the Summer schedule. There are many features at Bass Point that make it one of the popular resorts on the coast.

Lindsay Morison announces that "The Warrens of Virginia" will be presented at the Majestic next week with all of the elaborate detail of the Belasco production, which ran almost all last season at the $2 scale two years ago.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi," which Mr. Craig will present at the Castle Square Theatre next week, has never been seen in stock in Boston.

HADDOCK GO TO RECORD PRICE

The price of haddock jumped to-day at T Wharf from 6½ cents a pound to 11, which is the highest price ever known there except during the 6½ famine of October last. The demand by dealers to-day was 500,000 pounds and only 30,000 were landed.

The dogfish raid is the cause of the high price. Fishermen say that nothing like it was ever known on the New England coast. Millions of dogfish have struck in from deep water and are devouring all the food fish before them, exterminating them by multitudes and scaring the rest off feeding grounds.

Schools of dogfish four and five miles long have scurried up the coast. Their numbers are incredible, and tobacco so close to the shore now that even powerboat fishermen are having their trawls ruined. The carnage which the fishermen are sustaining to their times is great. The dogfish are so ravenous they grab at everything or anything.

The fishermen say that unless the dogfish leave the coast the fishing industry will be ruined for the summer. None of them knows where the dogfish came from and why they have struck inshore in such great schools.

The dogfish is a small species of shark and they are so famished and bold that they attack fishermen who venture into deep water, while they do around many in disgust. A small school of these would tear a swimmer to bits in a minute.

"ORDER CHECK" EDITION

CREDIT SECURED AT DEPARTMENT STORES FOR $1.00 A WEEK

Peoples Credit Co.'s Order Check Accepted as Cash At the Big Department Stores.

The people are no longer obliged to get credit from the old-time Credit Houses and pay their big unfair prices. Mr. Sallinger's modern method of buying on credit allows people to get anything sold by the department stores at cash bargain prices on credit Mr. Sallinger says:

"You see, the recognition of my Order Check, the Peoples Credit Co.'s Order Check by the Big Department stores makes me their duly outfitted representative, or, in other words, the Credit Agent for the Big Stores. By the simple arrangement of the Peoples Credit Co. Order Check the Big Stores are not put to the trouble of opening up a lot of accounts. The Peoples Credit Co. gives you all the credit you want, you can pay your bill a dollar a week if you like, and get anything you want at cash bargain prices at the Big Stores."

Our system appeals to those who never bought on credit before, fully eighty per cent. of our customers never called elsewhere. This fact alone is the volumes for our superior system and our method of conducting same. As our slogan truly proclaims, We are "Different from the Rest."

HOW WOMEN USE THE ORDER CHECK

How a Woman Uses the Order Check to Buy Big Store Bargains on Credit.

For instance—Suppose a woman wants a suit coat, skirt, hat or anything. She reads the Big Bargain Sale Ads of the Peoples Credit Co. and other stores, and she sees that Shepard & Norwell, a big, reputable house is advertising a special sale of suits and for business reasons they are selling a $25 suit or coat for $17.75 cash.

The woman wants to take advantage of this excellent bargain, but she hasn't the cash. All she has to do is to come to the Peoples Credit Co. We give her an order check for the $17.75, and she uses it at the store the same as cash, gets what she wants, at just the same price as her neighbor who has cash, would have to pay for it, and then she pays us a dollar a week. Isn't this better than going to the ordinary credit house, paying an exorbitant price for inferior goods?

CAUTION! To the Public

Do not be deceived by the misrepresentations of the Old Style Credit Houses who are trying to mislead the public by pretending to issue order checks on all the big department stores. This piece of deception is for the purpose of getting you to call at their establishments and then selling you the old style goods at the old exorbitant, outrageously high prices.

At various times, for the purpose of deception, these old style credit houses have incorporated in their announcements phrases taken from our advertising, and have in one instance infringed upon our business name, "The Peoples Credit Co.," changing it slightly for the purpose of misleading the public.

The Peoples Credit Co. is the only concern in Boston authorized to issue order checks on the big department stores, and we have copyrighted the words "Order Check" for the protection of our customers and the public.

How to Get Credit at the Big Stores And Pay $1.00 A Week

Get anything you want at the big department and cash specialty stores on credit at cash prices is what our new credit system allows you to do.

CRICKET AND BASEBALL

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE cricket game was over and the sun was sinking low,
The players in their blazers plodded homeward on a row
Then stopped within the clubhouse for a wash or bite or sup,
When up spoke Captain Edgerton to Bowler McIntire

"JOLLY well fixed, old chap!
You lost on the greatest sun;
But whether you win or whether you lose
You're always a gentleman
He's a Scotch and soda, old fellow
It will drive off the laboratory blues.
Keep up your nerve, old man, you'll well repaid
And a man can't always lose."

THE baseball game was over and the home team had been fleeced
The players stood around the club house smoking knockers mean
When up spoke Manager McGraw each head was a bone

"FINE, but at such prices admission
Must at once be cut
I could pick a team from the scrubs
Hoo-Hoo!
And lead our team out at once
He got here at ten to-morrow
That was the cry for I once
Had scrubs equal that of a expert
Was spent on the bench ten days"

HOORAY! AN ARMY OF WINGED TYPE TO THE RESCUE!

Claude and Rosamond sure are the hard luck kids. Here they are fleeing in mortal terror across the plains of Borneo on a motor cycle, closely pursued by Desperate Desmond in an aeroplane. It's bad enough to have to ride on one of these miniature earthquakes without having some low-brow chasing you with a flying machine.

But our hero is a clever guy at that. He figures that by plunging into the depths of the primeval forest he will be hidden from the villain's sight and thus foil any plot that the cowardly cur may be concocting against him. You've got to use your brains when you are fighting a villain of Desmond's caliber.

The forests of Borneo are chock full of wild beasts, who roam hither and yon in search of whom they may devour, but our brave Claude fears them not. He knows the demoniac din of the motorcycle will scare the best of these out of his way growth. Why, even we, brave as we are, jump ten feet every time we hear one.

But in the meantime Desperate Desmond has not been idle. He, too, remembers about those wild beasts, and he knows that some of them live in the tree tops. So he runs his machine down close to the ground, having bought a few propellers thresh about among the leaves, thereby stirring up a most unearthly racket.

The monkeys and gorillas who inhabit the tree tops are frightened out of their seven senses and immediately seek to escape the mysterious danger that threatens them from above. As they jump down from the trees they encounter our brave hero and our boastful Desmond, who they attack with a ferocity born of panic fear.

Claude and Rosamond are out of the forest again, but they are fighting for their lives with the bunch of gorillas, which are still hanging to the motorcycle. And up above is Desperate Desmond with an evil sneer on his lips as he contemplates their hopeless struggle against overwhelming odds. But the end is not yet. Wait for to-morrow's picture.

At Mrs. Dolan's Boarding House

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Ruth Spends An Evening in the Parlor with the Other Boarders.

"WON'T you join us?"

Ruth paused uncertainly at the parlor door. She had just come from the basement dining room and was going up to a lonely evening in her skylight room when Miss Schafer called to her from the parlor as she passed.

"Come in and join the party," she urged again as Ruth hesitated.

Every evening of the week she had been there Ruth had longed to join that little group in the parlor after dinner. But she had felt shy and self-conscious, and had each evening hurried on by and up to her own little room.

"Here, sit over by me." Miss Schafer made room for her on the worn red plush sofa as Ruth now timidly entered the room.

"Mr. Carter, have you met Miss Weston?"

Mr. Carter rose and bowed most profoundly.

Ruth was always embarrassed at an introduction. She never seemed to know whether she ought to shake hands or not. And now she half extended her hand, then awkwardly drew it back, when Mr. Carter, seeing the motion awkwardly extended his. It was an embarrassing moment and left Ruth more confused than ever.

"We were just begging Miss Marsh to play for us, and she's going to now. Isn't that right?"

"Oh, I don't feel like playing to-night. Somebody make Mr. Carter get his mandolin."

Coaxing Miss Marsh to Play.

"Not unless you play," answered Mr. Carter, adjusting his trousers to show a wider margin of the colored socks. "That's a bargain. I'll get my mandolin when you've played us that song from the play you were practicing the other night."

"Oh, I don't know that," protested Miss Marsh, who was obviously anxious to play, but wanted to be further urged.

"Yes, you do—you play it beautifully!"

Finally, after still more urging, Miss Marsh allowed herself to be led to the piano. She played the song with much vigor and the loud pedal, while they all hummed the chorus.

When she whirled around on the stool they clamored for more.

"No; it's Mr. Carter's turn now."

Mr. Carter was easily persuaded to go upstairs for his mandolin. After a preliminary tuning up, he played by ear, "The Last Rose of Summer," and "Old Black Joe."

"Play 'My Old Kentucky Home,'" begged Miss Schafer.

"Oh, isn't it lovely to be able to play by ear," murmured Miss Marsh.

When Mr. Carter had played several other old-fashioned airs, someone asked Miss Bailey to give them a recitation. After demurring and being urged (the usual process), Miss Bailey consented to recite "Little Orphan Annie," which was loudly applauded. Then "Little Boy Blue" was demanded.

"Well, if I could recite like that, I'd certainly go on the stage," exclaimed Miss Marsh when Miss Bailey sat down amid a murmur of praises.

"Miss Bailey IS going on the stage," Mr. Carter declared proudly.

"Oh, are you?" eagerly. "Tell us about it."

"Well, I know a Mr Day who's a great friend of Mr. Flohman's, and he's going to try to get me something this Winter."

"Oh, how interesting," exclaimed Ruth.

"What kind of a part would you like?"

"Well, in the amateur plays our Epworth League gave out home, I use to take the heavier parts, but, of course, here I would take an ingenue part to begin with."

"Mr. Carter, have you met Miss Weston?"

Where Ruth Takes a Hand

"Miss Weston, can't you play?" asked Miss Shafer suddenly.

"Oh, very little," answered Ruth hastily. "I'm sure you can. You're just modest. Now, please play something for us."

"No, really I couldn't."

"Oh, yes, she will; she only needs a little coaxing."

"No, no, it isn't that. I really haven't touched a piano in months. And I don't know anything of the new and popular things."

"Well, just play anything."

"Come, I'll escort you to the piano," and Mr. Carter, with an elaborate flourish, offered his arm.

Ruth drew back, flushed and embarrassed.

"Here, this is the way to get to the piano," and Miss Schafer took her hand and pulled her up from the couch and across the room to the piano stool.

Ruth, feeling that it would be less embarrassing to play than to protest any longer, played Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," rather sweetly and with a delicacy of expression, but with some inaccuracies.

"And you said you couldn't play!"

"Oh, DO play something else!"

"That's truly the only thing I can play without my music," and Ruth left the piano, going back to her seat on the sofa.

"But you've got your music here?"

"Some of it."

"Well, you'll have to bring it down some evening soon. We can't let you off when you play like that."

Here some one came in the front door with a latch key and started up the stairs.

"Oh, that's Mr. Holmes."

"Mr. Holmes—Mr. Holmes!" they called.

"We've just been waiting for you to come and sing 'Day Dreams' for us."

Mr. Holmes, a tall, awkward looking youth in a light checked suit, came in. He was introduced to Ruth, and then playing his own accompaniment of a few uncertain chords, he sang "Day Dreams" in a surprisingly deep bass voice.

"Well, I've got to be on the job early to-morrow," announced Mr. Carter, looking at his watch. "So I'll have to break away from this."

"And I must go, too," said Miss Marsh, rising.

"I guess it's time we were all going, or Mrs. Dolan will be kicking about the gas again."

Ruth's Vague Unrest

A few moments later Ruth was standing before her bureau unfastening the little silver pin that held her collar. Carefully she put it away and neatly smoothed out and folded up the collar.

Yes, they were kindly, sociable people, and yet—

She gazed thoughtfully at her reflection in the cheap mirror as she brushed her hair for the night. Why was she vaguely disappointed? Because they had all been rather ordinary and shingy? What had she expected to find in a cheap and sordid boarding house? A prince disguising in the guise of a shoeclerk?

As she turned out the light she told herself severely that she was getting to be a most critical and snobbish person.

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a young woman of great beauty, has been found in her rich apartments in the Feldsham Mansions. Rupert Osborne, her wealthy American suitor, is believed by all London to be the murderer. Scotland Yard, however, believes him innocent and advises him to hide in Tormouth, a seaside village. Furneaux, the great detective, is unaccountably agitated when assigned to the case, and his chief, Inspector Winter, resolves to watch him.

Furneaux learns from Hylda Prout, Osborne's secretary, that a dagger and axe-head, like the one used to kill Miss De Bercy, were missing from the private museum immediately after the murder. There are those who say Osborne was seen near the house about the time of the crime, although his friends came forward with an alibi.

Winter, tracking Furneaux, his own subordinate, learns that he was in Osborne's house and in the museum the very day of the murder.

Detective Clarke, also on the case, suspects that Anarchists had something to do with the crime. Disguised as a cook, he steals papers from an Anarchist, Janos. These are in turn stolen from him by a Frenchman, who turns out to be Furneaux. Strangely, the letters are from Osborne in Tormouth and addressed to Clarke. This amazes Clarke. They show that Mlle. De Bercy was connected with the Anarchists, except to appear as one in a play. A letter from another source tells how Mlle. De Bercy was married—to death as a traitoress by the anarchist society.

Furneaux goes to visit Hylda Prout. He shows her a letter from Osborne, one of the stolen ones, with the name Rosalind written in Osborne's hand. By the flash of the eye and the sudden color in her cheeks he knows she deeply loves Osborne.

Chief Winter learns a new thing from the murdered woman's cook. Furneaux was quarreling with Miss De Bercy a short time previous to the crime.

Furneaux goes down to Tormouth in disguise. He enters Osborne's room and in a bag finds a blood-stained scrap of Spanish lace, similar to that on the dressing gown which Rose de Bercy wore at the time she was killed. He then reads a letter to Miss Prout, which he knows will bring her to Tormouth. An elderly appearing lady comes and an introduces himself to her as William Pugh.

At Tormouth

"DID you by chance meet here a certain Mr. Furneaux?" she asked.

"Let me see," said Furneaux, I—stay—I believe I did. He was just departing at the time of my arrival—little dame—sharp, unpleasant face—I—hope I do not speak of a friend or relative?—but I believe I did hear someone say 'Mr. Furneaux.'"

"At any rate, he is not here now?" she demanded, with an air of decision.

"No, he is gone."

"Ah!" she murmured, and something in the tone of that "Ah!" made Furneaux's eye bluger doubtfully upon her an instant. Then the elderly lady wished to know who else was in the hotel, if there was anyone of any interest, and "Mr. Pugh" was apparently eager to gossip.

There is first of all a Mr. Glyn—a young man, an American, I think, of whom I have heard a whisper that he is enormously wealthy."

"Is he in the room?"

"No."

"Why is he—invisible?"

"I am told that he has made friends in Tormouth with a lady—a Mrs Marsh—who resides at 'St. Brinavels' some way out of town—not to mention Miss Marsh—Rosalind is her name—upon whom I hear he is more than a little sweet."

Covered His Lips

He bent forward, shading his lips with his palm to conceal the secret as it came out, and it was a strange thing that the newly-arrived visitor could not keep her ringlets from shaking with agitation.

"Well," she managed to say, "when young people meet—it is the old story. So he is probably at 'St. Brinavels' now?"

"Highly probable—if all I hear be true."

She twisted dame put her knife and fork together, rose, bowed with a gracious smile, and walked away. Five minutes later Furneaux followed her, went upstairs with soundless steps to his room, and within it stood some time listening at a crevice he had left between the door and the door-post.

Then he crept out, and spurting with swift suddenness, silent as a cat, to Osborne's room, sent the door open with a rush and instantly was bowing profoundly, saying: "My dear madam, how can you pardon me"

For the lady was also in Osborne's room, as Furneaux had known; and though there was no artificial light, enough moonlight flooded the room to show that even through her elaborate makeup a pallor was suggested in her face, as she stood there suspended, dumb.

Mr. Pugh seemed to be in a very pain of regret.

"I had no idea that it was your room"' he pleaded. "I—de forgive me—but I took it for my own!"

Oddly enough, the lady tittered, almost hysterically, though she was evidently much relieved to find who it was that had burst in so unceremoniously.

"The same accident has happened to me!" she cried. "I took it to be my room, but it doesn't seem——"

"Ah, then, we both . . . By the way," he added, with a magnificent effort to escape an embarrassing situation, "what beautiful moonlight! And the Tormouth country under it is like a fairy place. It is a sin to be indoors. I am going for a stroll. May I have the pleasure——?"

He swung his palms wheedlingly together, and his attitude showed that he was hanging on her answer.

"Yes, I should like to take a walk—thank you," she answered. Together they made for the door; he fluttered to his room, she to hers, to prepare. Soon they issued outside the hotel, walking slowly under the moon.

Apparently without definite directive, they turned up the hill in the direction of "St. Brinavels," nor was it many minutes before Mr. Pugh began to prove himself somewhat of a gallant and gifted in the saying of those airy-nothings which are supposed to be agreeable to the feminine ear. The lady, for her part, was not so thorny and hard of heart as one might have thought from the stiffness of her air, and a good understanding was quickly established between the oddly-assorted pair.

An Adventure

"Rather an adventure, this, for people of our age . . ." she tittered, as they began to climb the winding road.

"But, madam, we are not old!" exclaimed the lively Mr. Pugh, who might be nearly from his decrepit semblance. "Look at the moon—are not our hearts still sensible to its seductive influences? You, for one, I may possibly be near ing that charming age of forty—"

"Oh, sir, you flatter me——"

"Madam, no, on my word!—not a day over forty would be given you by anyone! And if you have the heart of twenty, as I am sure that you have, what matters it if——"

"Hush!" she whispered, as a soft sound of the piano from "St. Brinavels" reached them.

Before them on the roadway they saw several carriages drawn up near the great gates. The tinkle of the piano grew as they approached. Then they saw a few lantern lights in the grounds glimmering under the trees. Such signs spoke of a festive occasion, for once the English climate was gracious to its dupes.

Talk Was Audible

The lady, without saying anything to her companion, stepped into the shadow of a pine-tree opposite the manor-house, and stood there looking into the grounds over the bars of a small gate, beyond which a path ran through a shrubbery.

On the path were three couples, ladies with light scarves draped over their decollete dresses, men, bare-headed and smoking cigarettes. They were very close to her vision, which must have been well preserved for one of her age, despite Mr. Pugh's gallantry. The overhanging foliage was dense, and only enough moonlight oozed through the canopy of leaves to toss moving patterns on the lawn and paths.

But the lady's eyes were now like gimlets, with the very fire of youth burning in them, and it was with the sure fleetness of youth that she suddenly ran in a moment of opportunity from the tree to the gate, pushed it open, and slipped aside into a footpath that ran parallel with the hedge on which the "St. Brinavels" diners were now strolling.

With equal suddenness, or equal dispatch, her appearance, Mr. Pugh, too, became young again, as if both, like Philemon and Baucis, had all at once quaffed the elixir of youth; and he was soon by the young-old lady's side on the footpath. But her eyes, her ears, were so strained toward the lawn before her, that she seemed not to be aware of his presence.

"I did not guess that you were interested in the people here," he whispered.

That man now coming nearer is Mr. Glyn himself, and with him is Miss Rosalind March."

"Ah-h-h!" came from her lips, a murmur long-drawn, absent-minded, her eyes peering keenly forward.

He nudged her.

"Is it fitting that we should be here? We place ourselves in a difficult position, if seen."

"Sh-h-h-h . . ."

Still he pestered her.

"Really it is a blunder. . . . We—we become—caved-peepers—! Let us—I suggest to you——"

"Oh, do keep quiet," she whispered irritably; and in that instant the talk of Osborne and Rosalind became audible to her. She heard him say:

"Yes, I confess I have known Osborne, and I believe the man perfectly incapable of the act attributed to him by a hasty public opinion."

"Intimately known him?"

Rosalind turned her eyebrows upward in the moonlight. Seen thus, she was amazingly beautiful.

"Do we intimately know anyone? Do we intimately know ourselves?" asked Osborne as he paused within five yards of the two on the path. "I think I may say that I know Osborne about as well as I know anyone, and I am confident that he is horribly maligned. He is a young man of—yes, I will say that for him—of good intentions; and he is found guilty, without trial, of a wrong which he never could have committed—and the wrong which he has committed he is not found guilty of."

"What wrong?" asked Rosalind.

"I have heard—I know, in fact—that in the short time that has passed since the murder of Miss de Bercy, Osborne, her acknowledged lover, has allowed himself to love another."

Rosalind laughed, with the quiet amusement of well-bred indifference.

"What a weird person!" she said.

And as these words passed beyond hearing, a hiss, like a snake in the grass, rose from the shrubbery behind them, a hiss of venom intensely low, and yet loud enough to be heard by Furneaux, who standing a little behind the lady of the ringlets, rubbed his hands together in silent and almost mischievous self-congratulation.

The hiss came from the lawn was not far, the words of the recurring pair were soon again within earshot. The new glance of the watching woman, cavorting, peering, dwelt on them—or rather on one of them. She gave no sign of recognition at all. Her very soul was centred on Rosalind, whose walk, whose lips, whose eyes, whose skin, whose voice she ran over and estimated as an expert accountant reckons up a column of figures to ascertain their significance.

He missed no item in that calculation. She noted the overskirt of Chantilly, the wrap of Venetian lace on the girl's head, the white slippers, the rose in the bosom of her corsage with the harmless vanity of the artist's skill, all these that fixed stare ravenously devoured and digested, while Rosalind took half a dozen slow steps.

"But seriously," she heard Osborne say, "what is your opinion of a love so repugnantly fickle and flighty as this of Osborne's?"

"Let me alone with your Osborne," Rosalind retorted with another little laugh. "A person of such a mood is merely uninteresting, and below being a topic for the dead lady's father or somebody here to whip him—I cannot care, I'm afraid. Let us talk about——"

"Ourselves?"

"Ourselves and our ling'"

Giving Baby Away

By WINIFRED BLACK

A MAN and woman who lived in a little Illinois town took their first baby to the foundling asylum the other day and left it there.

They couldn't bear the child, they said, "because it was a girl, and, oh," the mother explained, "she was so dreadfully lonely."

If I were that baby girl I'd sit up in my crib and sing "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue!" at the top of my voice, no matter if I was only three days old, just to celebrate my good luck in getting away from a pair of geese like that.

And I'll warrant that the man who was so fastidious about his daughter's looks to bow legged, or cross-eyed, or knock-kneed, or hollow-chested, or something else that is ugly and disagreeable to see.

Did you ever notice that that is the sort of man who's always talking about a girl's looks?

And the mother? I'd like to have a plain tone of that mother. She must be a beautiful creature herself; such soulful eyes, so much expression, and, oh, the soft, loving heart of her and the brilliant, intelligent mind!

Why, you poor little goose, you don't for a minute that some of the prettiest babies in the world grow up to be the ugliest women, and some of the ugliest babies blossom into the most beautiful beauties?

And, besides, what has beauty to do with it? She was your flesh and blood, the very bone of your bone. You ought to have been willing to die inch by inch before you'd give her up to strangers.

When will women get over their absurd superstition about beauty? Who's the happiest woman you know? Come now, be honest, think it over, the very happiest? The girl who was always called the beauty of the village? Poor thing, she's been married a few years now, and you'd have to take an X-ray to discover a trace of good looks about her.

A Child in Spring

WHEN I am sent to bed at night
"Now mind and go to sleep," they say
And both your eyes so very tight
And quite forget the song bright day.

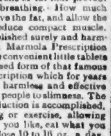
But though I shut my eyes quite tight,
And never move or peep or bark,
The little songs that steer all night
Come singing, singing through the dark.

The robin's nest I found all warm,
The bluebells underneath the tree,
The orchids in the lane I'll form
They all come back and sing to me.

So though I mean to go til sleep
As mother said, when one by one
Mr. little songs come singing in
I MUST just listen till they're done!

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE LUNGS



How many people suffering from excessive fat can expand their lungs to fullest extent—giving to their body the abundance of fresh air? The short, panting breath of obesity makes the heart work faster, sending the blood through veins and arteries at double pressure, giving no time for proper nourishment of the body. Light, sweet, white and wholesome bread is a delight on any table, in any household, at any meal. As an aid to the best results always use Borden's Evaporated Milk as follows:

RECIPE

Heat moderately one-half cup Borden's Evaporated Milk diluted with one and one-half cups water, and turn it into the mixing bowl, adding one tablespoonful butter and one teaspoonful salt. When cool add one-half cup yeast and stir in from three to four cups flour, or enough to make a drop batter; beat thoroughly until smooth and full of air bubbles. Cover and let stand in a warm place until morning. In the morning add enough flour to make a dough. About two quarts of flour in all will be required. Mix thoroughly, knead until smooth and elastic and will not stick to the board or hands. Let rise; when light turn it onto the floured board and shape it into loaves with as little kneading as possible. Let rise to double its bulk; bake in a hot oven about one hour.

The Story of a Week as Mrs. Belmont's Farmerette.

POLICE FUND TO AID POOR WIDOW

To-day the men at City Square Police Station, Charlestown, will complete their addition to the $47 raised among the night men yesterday for Mrs. Catherine Cadigan, the station scrubwoman. Mrs. Cadigan's husband has just died. The attention of the station men was called to it by Mrs. Elizabeth Holmes, matron. The night men chipped in $47 in a hurry and passed the hat over to the day side to swell the sum.

A word was enough. The patrolmen knew of the struggle Mrs. Cadigan had made since her husband became a victim of consumption a year ago. She went to work. Out of her $5 a week for scrubbing she has paid $1.25 a week to another woman to care for her household and two children. Two dollars went for rent. The remainder supplied food and clothing. The death of Mr. Cadigan brought funeral expenses and other charges.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STEEL STOCKS DULL MARKET

NEW YORK, May 25.—Steel stocks opened lower to-day and were freely supplied in consequence of the price cuts by the Republic Iron & Steel Company. The general list also was lower and the market had a dull, heavy tone at the opening. U. S. Steel opened at 78 or ⅝ below Wednesday's close. Republic Steel opened off ¼. A great deal of Steel was thrown into the market in the early trading and the tone here was a reflection of the London market where they were under heavy selling pressure. There was no indication of support from room traders. Commission houses as a rule were inclined to the belief that the worst was even further.

The following declines were recorded in the initial prices: Amalgamated Copper ¼, B. R. T. ¼, Anaconda, ⅛, Canadian Pacific ⅝, Pennsylvania ¼, Southern Pacific ¼ and St. Paul ¼. C. & O. was one of the few exceptions to the downward tendency, opening with a fair advance of ¼. Reading, Union Pacific and Erie opened unchanged.

It Is Not at All Difficult to Understand the Existence of a Real Trinity

The Trinities of Various Religions Are Far Above Our Heads, and We Have No Right to Discuss Them. But Have You Ever Thought About the Trinity of Beethoven, the Grand Piano and Paderewski?

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one."—I. John, 5:7.

This quotation is sent to us by a reader who apparently has lost his faith in religious teachings, and expresses the belief—set forth in a thick pamphlet—that any teaching as to a religious Trinity is an impossibility, an absurdity which should not be imposed upon the human mind.

It is well occasionally to remind human beings that things which to them SEEM impossible are not impossible, and that statements which we believe to be the creations of imagination and scheming are often expressions of profound truth.

We do not propose here, or in any other department of this newspaper, to criticize or discuss religious teachings. A newspaper should have little or nothing to do with religion—except to admire it and reverence it.

But we wish to tell the incredulous friend who sends us this particular quotation that there is nothing in it which need arouse skepticism or contempt.

As an example and proof of the fact that a Trinity may be REAL, and that three separate things MAY find expression through three voices, and that all three of them may be one, we ask our friend to imagine the following conditions:

You are sitting in a room with the door closed. In the adjoining room there is a sound, the playing of a Beethoven sonata.

You hear the music. If you had never seen a piano, and knew nothing of music, you would not believe that in that room there were three separate and distinct forces, giving expression simultaneously to one thought, one sound. You would not believe if it were said to you:

"In that room there are three that bear record of the greatness of musical genius, the piano, the artist, and the dead composer, and these three are one."

That is a paraphrase of the text which is sent to us, and yet we can show you that in that room where you hear the music it is perfectly possible to have the three distinct persons bearing record to the greatness of music, and to have those three ONE.

In that room there is a grand piano. In front of the piano sits Paderewski playing. And on the piano there is a book containing one of the Beethoven sonatas.

The genius that created the piano died long ago. The overwhelming genius that wrote the Beethoven sonata died long ago. Paderewski is the only living one in the Trinity. He sits there and plays. Yet you hear the three voices; they all bear record to the greatness of music.

AND THESE THREE ARE ONE.

If you should take away the piano, there would be no music.

If you should take away Paderewski, leaving the piano and the score, there would still be no music.

If you take away the text by Beethoven, still there would be no music. The piano, the player and the music of the dead composer are necessary, they are all separate, and yet all three are ONE.

There, kind friends, you have proof of the fact that the Trinity speaking through three voices, all saying the same words, all three necessary to expression, are in reality one.

Workers of San Francisco Honor the Memory of T. T. Williams

An Honor Well Deserved—He Was the Friend of Every Man That Did an Honest Day's Work

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, We learn with deepest regret of the death of Mr. Thomas T. Williams; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the City Front Federation of San Francisco, this 19th day of April, 1911, that in the passing of Mr. Thomas T. Williams we recognize and deplore the loss of a staunch friend and powerful ally, one who by reason of his unfailing enthusiasm, tireless energy and great ability did much to encourage and assist this Federation in its early struggles for the rights of its members; further,

Resolved, That we hereby make full acknowledgment of the debt of gratitude which we owe to our deceased friend and pledge ourselves to honor his memory as of one who lived and died in loyal devotion to the cause of humanity; further,

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the records of this Federation, and that copies thereof be sent to his family and be given to the press, including the San Francisco Examiner and the New York Journal.

H. HUNTSMAN.

All of those who knew the late T. T. Williams know how well he deserves the thanks and the friendship of workingmen. By this we mean all kinds of workingmen—those that work and through their work give employment to thousands, and those that work as individuals.

It is pleasing to know that a man like T. T. Williams, powerful, democratic, honest and fearless, is not forgotten, although the grass of the first Spring since his death is green upon his grave.

Such a man lives and is useful in this world many years after his body has vanished. He has set an example.

Phrases and Paraphrases

By WEX JONES

My grandfather's clock was too large for the shelf, so it stood ninety years on the floor. It was taller by half than the old gink himself, though it weighed not a penny-weight more. It was bought on the morn of the day that he was born, and was always his pleasure and pride; but it stopped short, and we couldn't get it to go again, not even when the missus prodded the works with a 'arpin, when the old man died.

Ninety years without slumbering,
Tick tock, tick tock,
His life seconds numbering,
Tick tock, tick tock.

It stopped short, never to go again,
When the old man died.

In watching the pendulum swing to and fro, a habit which the pendulum contracted in infancy, he spent many hours while a boy, although he should have been out weeding the garden instead, and in childhood and manhood the clock seemed to know, and to share both his grief and his joy, for it struck thirteen when he got home about 3 o'clock one morning and told his blooming and beautiful bride he had been detained at the office, and that yarn was stopped short, never to go again.

My grandfather said that of those he could hire not a servant so faithful be found; for it wasted no time and had but one desire—at the close of each week to be wound. It was kept in its place, except, of course, on the occasion when the old man took it around to his uncle's to raise a few bob on it—but it stopped short and couldn't be bucked again when the old man died.

Ninety years from the clockshop,
tick, tock, tick, tock,
All spent in the hockshop,
hick, hock, hick, hock,
But it stopped out—never to go in again—
When the old man gave up the struggle.

It rang an alarm in the dead of the night, an alarm that for years had been dumb, and we knew that his spirit was fuming for fight, that the hour of the slaughter had come. He strode from his bed with a loud and murderous tread, and seized it a terrible bust, and it stopped short—never to go again—while the old man cussed.

It is an ancient mariner, and he stopneth one of three, and though I had to watch a truth, of course, he picked out me. "The bridegroom's doors are open wide, and I am next of kin; he has highballs made of bourbon and rickeys made of gin." He held me with his skinny hand. "There was a ship," he quoth, and as soon as he quoth I knew it was all off. Any person who quoth is in a ballad and has necessarily a lot to say. There were no moving pictures in the day of ballads. In Boston when a stranger comes up and begins about a ship, you know that he's an old sailor and that his ship's over on the Chelsea side and that all he wants is five cents to get over there before she sails for Bangkok. You give him five cents and he grounds upon the nearest bar.

This Bloke was a wonder, however. As far as I could make out he shot a seagull. When he had at length departed, the wedding breakfast was over, the grub all gone and the bottles empty. Or, stay, did I meet this ancient mariner before or after that wedding? Blest if I know. Must ask the other two guests, for I distinctly remember I was one of three. Or did I see triple. Anyway, he shot the seagull.

Wide-Awake Brockton

From the Brockton Enterprise,

The Boston AMERICAN on Sunday had a page writeup of Brockton as a city "breaking records in the commercial world." There were pictures of Mayor Harry C. Howard, of a section of Main street, of the new Home Bank and of Pontiac Rag Apple, the famous Montello record cow. The article took up various lines in which Brockton has been a leader or is a leader now, and spoke in most complimentary terms of certain features in Brockton life which were either first tried here in this country or first realized full success here.

Altogether the article made it plain that Brockton is a pretty lively and enterprising town, even though, as the article mentioned, it can't seem to support a real hotel.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

CORONATION OF KING GEORGE

Editor AMERICAN:

The spending of millions of dollars—many of them good American dollars, more's the pity—on the coronation of King George of England, next month, seems to be a wanton waste of money, by, a criminal waste of money.

Think of the vanity, the incongruity, the monstrous folly of such a spectacle. Great ladies, wearing gowns covered with diamonds that cost fabulous sums of money, money that has been wrung from the earnings of the common people; aristocrats, nabobs, titled nobodies, tricked out in their glittering uniforms, all bowing and scraping before a poor feeble mortal, a worm of the dust—just like one of us. Could there be a stronger proof that we are still only half civilized, a lot of semi-barbarians, selfish and brutal?

Oh, the shame and monstrous folly of it all. Worse still, think of the thousands of idle, starving men that are walking the streets of London, the little children living in the slums of that great city; of the poor women willing to work for a mere pittance to keep body and soul together. Think of the privations, the sorrows, the unutterable sufferings and the never-ending tragedies in the lives of the poor and needy, not only of England, but of the whole world. What a fearful drain. What an eternity of agony and death!

There are millions of dollars for the crowning of a king, but not a dollar to clothe, to feed, and to build homes for the poor!

"WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?"

Editor AMERICAN:

When God threatened to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah, Abraham interceded on behalf of these wicked cities. He begged that if a certain number of righteous men might be found, the cities might be saved. He got down as low as ten, but there were not even that number to be found, so the Lord very properly rained fire and brimstone on the sinful cities, and they were destroyed.

As I [illegible] or given last week at the Boston City Club to Raymond Unwin, the English architect who laid out the Hampstead Garden Suburb on the north of London, also Letchworth (first garden city), Dr. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, who was one of the several speakers, spoke quite emphatically of the harm being done to Cambridge by the building of three-decker tenement houses, and he spoke of the nomadic habits of the people who inhabit those "wooden tents." Almost every residential district around Boston is suffering from this evil, and the question of the time is: "What must we do to be saved?" My answer is that we must get together and build on improved principles, safe-guarded by laws and regulations, a garden suburb for Boston.

A hundred or less righteous men could do this and save Boston from our present wicked ways of housing our people. Moreover, as the Bible says, we are in jeopardy every hour," for my old and esteemed friend, John A. Fox, the architect, reminds me that, by the building of so many wooden buildings, so close together, covering nearly all the ground, we are in danger of one of the biggest conflagrations imaginable.

There are plenty of right thinking people about Boston to initiate and money enough can be obtained to build a garden suburb if they would only unite in cooperation for a good purpose.

AUTO NOISES, GAS AND DUST

Editor AMERICAN:

The noisy, unearthly, nerve-racking horns, the clouds of dust raised by auto speeders, the gusts of noxious gasoline vapors expelled by machines operated by careless drivers, makes life anything but unalloyed joy for the people in the streets these days. Is there no relief for the common pedestrian? Yes! Let the police arrest operators of motor cars that are violating the law which says:

"No bell, horn or other device for signalling shall be sounded so as to make a harsh, objectionable or unreasonable noise."

If there is no law against the gases and dirt, let the suffering public avoid the thoroughfares where such nuisances exist. Let the victims all buy airplanes.
